Heavy rain likely to bring some disruption through the weekend.

What to expect

- Flooding of a few homes and businesses is possible
- Spray and flooding on roads probably making for difficult driving conditions and longer car and bus journey times; impacts on rail travel are possible too.

Further details

One or more periods of heavy rain are expected across Northern Ireland and parts of Scotland through late Saturday and early Sunday, leading to some travel disruption and flooding.

20-40 mm will fall quite widely, with a few hilly areas receiving 60-80 mm, all within about 18 hours. Poor travel conditions will be exacerbated by the very strong winds, for which separate warnings are in force. Rain will give way to squally showers later on Sunday morning.
